My 86 year old father is in AgedCare living and even though it is not where he wants to be he is knowingly there to get the care, help and assistance that he requires. The buildings are well maintained and the administration staff and carers excell in their efforts to keep all the residents safe and happy at all times. Though this is not always an easy job to manage. Cranky old fella's like my dad can leave them biting their tongues some days, but they always treat him with respect and dignity. The only negative would probably be the food which sometimes looks rather ordinary. But nevertheless I'm sure fills all the dietary requirements.

My mother is very happy there. She always has someone asking her if she needs anything. the staff are amazing. she has been there for nearly a year and calls it home.
