After spending a month in the Lyell Mc Ewin Hospital I was transitioned for two months to the Helping Hand Nursing Home in Ingle Farm South Australia. Where I received excellent care

The care was as good as the staff that were on, the issue was that staff get burnt out due to too much to do and not enough time to do it. Too many agency staff due to stress/burnout/injury from regular staff. My mother was well cared for because my father and I worked as a tandem team each day to make sure all her needs were met. I did her washing and took her out regularly. I also settled her into bed each evening. Dad fed her, made sure she had plenty of fluids, etc. My concern is for people who do not have someone to advocate for them or who are unable to speak out. On the whole the carers were hard working and caring and certainly don't get enough praise for the hard work that they do!
