Very disappointing facility - lacking in almost every area, particularly clinical care.

For the cost slightly disappointing lifestyle program and therapy programs for dementia residents. Too much time left alone sitting in front of tvs when much more could be done to keep these poor residents like my father engaged and stimulated. Not even a hydrotherapy pool or any real exercise program. And this one of the most expensive aged care facilities in the eastern area. A suggestion could for the likes of those who enjoyed playing golf a mini golf area set up that could be enjoyed year round. Might be more entertaining than a movie that has no meaning.

My father has been in aged care for the past 3 years. On the whole care is very good but small things do get missed. I.e. not a lot of care with dressing lost items of belongings even though everything is labelled. Sometimes personal care workers don't seem to have requirements.

capabilities to properly interpret the patients requirements. It us a very difficult situation for families to ensure loved ones are given every opportunity to get some enjoyment from life when largely left to their own devices. My experience has been that a very expensive facility doesent always equal any extras. I.e. no hydrotherapy pool , inadequate entertainment/stimulating lifestyle program as even those with dementia like my father still can appreciate the small things. I.e. for a man that enjoyed golf why not a mini golf set up which could be enjoyed all year round in the expansive lounge areas he pays for andd only occupies one chair where they put him in front of a tv all day.mildly dissappointing .

Really cosy and great setting with friendly staff. My mum has been been in this facility for over 2 years now. The staff go out of there way to make residents feel happy, and us visitors feel welcome. Seems to be lots of activities planned, lots of excursions. Even has a cinema room which is not common. Its extra service place, but has very good neighbourly feel. Mum is very happy here - would really recommend it to anyone
